

Ma warns of 'big trade war' between China, US

Beijing, Jan 27

E-commerce giant Alibaba's founder Jack Ma has warned of a "big trade war" between China and the US under the new Trump presidency if conflicts were not dealt with properly.

He said China's economic outlook will be "tougher than expected" due to continued slowdown of the economy.

"In the coming three to five years... the economic situation will be even more arduous than everyone had expected," the billionaire said at an annual meeting of the General Association of Zhejiang Entrepreneurs.

Referring to the slowdown of the Chinese economy to 6.7% last year, the slowest in over two decades, he said it was "only natural" that China's rapid growth over the past three decades could not continue.

He added that the focus should be shifted to the quality of growth, such as upgrading its manufacturing industry.

About the outlook on

China-US relations, Ma, who recently met US President Donald Trump, said despite an "overall optimistic" outlook on trade between the world's two largest economies, conflicts "will definitely be there".

"If (the conflicts) were not dealt with properly, they might lead to a relatively big trade war which is not a good thing for China, the US or the world economy," he was quoted as saying by Hong Kong-based South China Morning Post which is owned by him.

Trump has accused China of being a currency manipulator and has proposed steep tariffs on imports from the country.

Ma also said Trump is a smart person and should not be underestimated.

"It is only that his speaking style and the way he does things are different from what we are used to expecting from politicians. He saw the many problems existing now in the US and he hopes to solve them in a different way. He is a businessman, a man of action and result-oriented," Ma said, adding that he believed Trump was "a very smart person".

In his meeting with Trump before the US billionaire was sworn in as the 45th President of the US, Ma promised to sell over a million US products in China through his e-commerce outlets and promised to create a million jobs in America.

China 'steps up preparedness for possible military conflict with US'

Beijing, Jan 27: China is stepping up preparedness for a possible military conflict with the US as President Donald Trump has signalled that he will follow a more hardline policy to counter Beijing's claims on the disputed South China Sea and on other issues, official media reports said.

A commentary on the official website of People's Liberation Army's (PLA) said on January 20, the day Trump assumed presidency, that the chances of war have become "more real" amid a more complex security situation in the Asia Pacific.

The commentary written by an official at the national defence mobilisation department in the Central Military Commission, China's overall military high command, said the US call for rebalancing of its strategy in Asia, military deployments in the East and South China Seas and the setting up of a missile defence system in South Korea were hot spots getting closer to ignition.

"A war within the President's term" or 'war breaking out tonight' are not just slogans, they are becoming a practical reality," Hong Kong based South China Morning Post quoted the commentary as saying.

The official People's Daily said in another commentary on Sunday that China's military would conduct exercises on the high seas regardless of foreign provocations.

China's sole aircraft carrier Liaoning had passed through the narrow Taiwan Strait last month.

The commentary referred to remarks by the US secretary of state nominee Rex Tillerson that the US should stop China's access to artificial islands it has built in disputed areas of the South China Sea.

New White House spokesman Sean Spicer said that the US would prevent China from taking over territory in international waters in the South China Sea. With their threats to China, Trump and Tillerson are making "rookie blunders" that will only hurt US credibility, the commentary said.

"Tillerson's statement was too arrogant. If the new US administration follows this route and adopts this attitude, then it will lead to a war between China and the US and that would mean the end of US history or even all of humanity," Jin Canrong, associate dean of the Department of International Studies at Renmin University of China, told state-run

As Trump takes office, Wells Fargo site to aid staff vanishes

Washington, Jan 27: After President Donald Trump took office, the US department of labour quietly removed a special website it created as a resource for current and former Wells Fargo employees on workplace issues, including whistleblower retaliation complaints, according to a US lawmaker.

Senator Elizabeth Warren, a Democrat, sent a letter on Friday to acting labour secretary Edward Hugler after discovering on Tuesday that the site, www.dol.gov/wellsfargo, read: "Page not found."

It is one of a growing number of web pages that have been removed since Trump became president. His administration also instructed the environmental protection agency to remove pages on climate change.

Former labour department secretary Thomas Perez created the special website last September, shortly after Wells Fargo was ordered to pay $190 million in fines and customer restitution after its high-pressure sales environment led to the opening of as many as 2 million accounts that customers may not have authorised. Some of the bank's employees filed whistleblower complaints with the labour department's occupational safety and health administration (OSHA), saying they had been fired for reporting the gaming by Wells Fargo.

"Taking down this website enables Wells Fargo to escape full responsibility for its fraudulent actions and the department to shirk its outstanding obligations to American workers," wrote Warren, who is a member of the Senate committee on health, education, labour and pensions, which oversees the labor department.

When he launched the site, Perez pledged to Warren he would conduct a top-to-bottom review of all the Wells Fargo complaints the department had received to see how they were handled.

The website also offered assistance on issues including proper pay for employees and workplace discrimination.

Reuters previously reported multiple problems with some of the whistleblower cases, including one involving a former Wells Fargo employee who waited nearly five years to be interviewed after telling OSHA she was fired for reporting the gaming.

White House misspells May's name three times

London, Jan 27: In a major gaffe, the White House misspelled British Prime Minister Theresa May's name three times in an official schedule of her visit to the US, confusing her name with a porn star.

Staff in US President Donald Trump's administration missed out the 'h' in her name in a document setting out the plan for talks on Friday, including a "bilateral meeting" at the Oval Office and a "working luncheon" following a joint press conference.

The White House's daily guidance and press schedule from the office of the press secretary read — "In the afternoon, the president will partake in a bilateral meeting with United Kingdom Prime Minister, Theresa May" — missing out the "h" in her name, despite spelling it correctly elsewhere, the Mirror reported.

It continued: "The president participates in a working luncheon with Theresa May, Prime Minister of United Kingdom."

The error was repeated in a later guidance note

Verizon's Charter flirtation portends Trump era

New York, Jan 27: Now that President Donald Trump, a self-described deal artisan, is occupying the White House, corporate America is letting its imagination run wild on potential mergers.

Cable, phone and media company CEOs are dreaming up bigger strategies, crossing industry lines and expanding takeover target lists as rules from a previous era start to lift. While few concrete actions have been taken so far, executives are studying the president's moves carefully for signs that it's open season for big deals.

Verizon Communications chief executive officer Lowell McAdam talked to Greg Maffei, CEO of Liberty Media, about buying one of Liberty's biggest holdings — the $104 billion cable giant Charter Communications, people familiar with the matter said Thursday.

That overture highlights what could be a new wave of consolidation as large companies start to look beyond maturing industries and plan for bigger competitive threats, with wireless technology ushering in speedier 5G networks.

Cable, phone and media company CEOs are dreaming up bigger strategies, crossing industry lines and expanding takeover target lists as rules from a previous era start to lift

"Companies are gearing up because no one knows if this will turn into an 'anything goes' environment where people have to be ready to think about deals they had not contemplated before," said Walt Piecyk, an analyst with BTIG.

While companies are envisioning more ambitious targets for deals, they're waiting to see key positions filled in the Justice Department's antitrust division and to watch how the new administration handles some of the first deals under its purview, such as AT&T's acquisition of Time Warner.

A months-long federal auction of wireless airwaves has also kept some of the telecommunications industry's biggest companies from discussing other transactions because of collusion rules.

Even Verizon hasn't yet formally approached Charter, which is one of more than a dozen companies, including cable, media and communications network operators, on McAdam's list, according to people familiar with the matter. Still, there are early signs that the Trump administration will be more deal-friendly than its predecessor.

"He's appointed a very pro-business cabinet — that portends good things," said Francis Aquila, a partner at merger and acquisition law firm Sullivan & Cromwell, in an interview this week on Bloomberg Television.

"He's already, through executive action, put on hold further regulations. He has basically a regulation czar and has talked about cutting back regulations that impede business. We know we're going to get corporate tax reform and that's going to lead to a more efficient economy." Bloomberg

Trump aide tells media 'to keep its mouth shut'

Washington, Jan 27: A top advisor of the US President Donald Trump has told the mainstream media to "keep its mouth shut" as he called them the new administration's "opposition", ratcheting up its simmering feud with journalists.

Stephen K Bannon, chief White House strategist for Trump, said the media should now keep quiet after being "humiliated" by the outcome of the November presidential election won by Trump.

"The media should be embarrassed and humiliated and keep its mouth shut and just listen for a while," Bannon said.

The brazen rebuke suggests there's unlikely to be pause in the administration's war against the US news media, which has been calling out Trump over ginned up and "alternative facts" statements. PTI

China's army of global homebuyers is suddenly short on cash

Beijing, Jan 27: China's escalating crackdown on capital outflows is sending shudders through property markets around the world.

In London, Chinese citizens who clamoured to purchase flats at the city's tallest apartment tower three months ago are now struggling to transfer their down payments. In Silicon Valley, Keller Williams Realty says inquiries from the China have slumped since the start of the year. And in Sydney, developers are facing "big problems" as Chinese buyers pull back, according to consultancy firm Basis Point.

"Everything changed" as it became more difficult to send money offshore, said Coco Tan, a broker associate at Keller Williams in Cupertino, California.

Less than a month after China announced fresh curbs on overseas payments, anecdotal reports from realtors, homeowners and developers suggest the restrictions are already weighing on the world's biggest real estate buying spree. While no one expects

Chinese demand to disappear anytime soon, the clampdown is deterring first-time buyers who lack offshore assets and the expertise to skirt tighter capital controls.

"If it's too difficult, I'm out," said Zheng, 66, a retired civil servant in Shanghai who declined to give his first name to avoid attracting regulatory scrutiny. He may abandon a 2.4 million yuan ($348,903) home purchase in western Melbourne, even after shelling out a 300,000 yuan deposit last August.

He's due to make another big payment next month.

The change spooking Zheng and his compatriots came in a statement from the state administration of foreign exchange (SAFE) on December 31, hours before the reset of Chinese citizens' annual foreign currency quotas.

Among other requirements, SAFE said all buyers of foreign exchange must now sign a pledge that they won't use their $50,000 quotas for offshore property investment. Bloomberg
